Emotional Hijack: How to Not Take Things Personal!

Summary: The ability to keep our emotions under control requires more than a willing heart. It requires self-management and self-awareness skills. Our specific manner of comprehending situations dictates our subsequent reactions. This training explores the root cause of emotional highjack and how to deal with it. Will explore the “Why” behind many of the learned behaviors and emotions. Learn the different ways your brain processes information and the automatic interpretations we make to daily events. Explore and understand our reactions and the direct relationship of our thinking and feeling.

Learning Objectives

- How to increase personal awareness self- management skills and manage emotional impulses.
- Explore events that trigger an amygdala attach (Emotional Hijack)
- Expose participants to a practical technique of how to deal with conflict and difficult situations where our emotional brain takes over
- Explore tools to regulate emotions and respond to situations appropriately
